Self-Praise Across Cultures and Contexts Chaoqun Xie, Ying Tong, 2022-10-03 This book explores the extent to which self praise is acceptable in both offline and online contexts across different genres platforms and cultural backgrounds The data analyzed encompass both naturally occurring daily conversation as well as institutional talk and elicited experiments and interviews types and are explored at both quantitative and qualitative levels to offer a relatively systematic and comprehensive inquiry into self praise as social interaction Contributors to this book not only draw on traditional politeness theories but are also informed by social psychology interactional sociolinguistics CMC and multimodal discourse analysis They are inspired by pragmatics but also go beyond to ground their studies within locally situated cultural contexts most of which are under presented in the current academic world Their efforts substantiate the fact that self praise is most worthy of intensive analytic attention This book appeals to students and researchers in the field and contributes to the way communication is facilitated through different ways of deploying linguistic and interactional resources

Practices of Traditionalization in Central Asia Judith Beyer, Peter Finke, 2020-05-21 Practices of Traditionalization in Central Asia focuses on how tradition is everyday ified in contemporary Central Asia including Tatarstan and Tibet and what people seek to achieve in its name The case studies range from political demonstrations and industrial workers gatherings to institutions of religious education minority communities weddings and the Internet In this volume we regard tradition as a practice that needs to be explored in its institutional and interactional context at a particular time rather than as a reliable guide to the past tradition can only be judged from the present it is an interpretative concept not a descriptive one While the scholarly debate has so far centered on what tradition entails and what it does not including the question of invention and ownership less attention has been devoted to investigating how tradition is enacted enforced or motivated in short how it gets done In Central Asia practices of traditionalization are closely related to the transformation of the socialist order and the emergence of highly stratified societies This volume asks When does tradition emerge as a line of argumentation who are the actors invoking it and how is it being materially manifested Practices of Traditionalization in Central Asia will be of great interest to scholars of Central Asia Anthropology History Political Science and Sociology The chapters were originally published as a special issue of Central Asian Survey
