Beginners and Dummies Barbara Dawson, 2020-08-18 Meal prepping is making a meal or recipe then portioning it out to grab and go meals for later. If you've ever kept your leftovers from dinner to take with you for lunch then you've already mini meal prepped. Generally though meal prepping refers to preparing 3-7 days worth of food at a time. Think of it like making your lunches for the week all at once instead of making your lunch every morning. You can use this same technique for breakfast, lunch, dinner, and snacks. Meal prepping doesn't necessarily waste and reduce time to eat outside unless you plan ahead or a budget. When making your meal plan, ask yourself the question: "How long will it take to eat healthy meals without having to do it every day?" Meal prepping is not for everyone. It is good for those who value convenience and more time than others. With meal prepping you generally eat the same thing for a few days in a row so if you don't like leftovers or get bored with food, meal prepping isn't for you. If having more control over what you eat and maximizing your time, your budget is more valuable to you than doing something different every day, meal prepping is a good idea. Generally, meal prepping is seen as a meal for yourself or maybe one other person, not a whole family. Meal prepping for a whole family would be quite difficult but it would be a great idea if you have a small family. A fridge is stored with fresh ingredients in a slow cooker in the kitchen. In addition to this, the way food is packed and the individual nuances of your refrigerator can impact the health of your refrigerated meals. The smell of the food is not acceptable, and the flavor will be affected by the eater. Always begin with the fresh ingredients guidelines to be the FDA and then follow them to suit your own preferences. In general, I don't like to eat more than five days worth of food, but I find that by following these guidelines, the food is still fresh and healthy.
