

NVIDIA & Jensen Huang

How might NVIDIA's technology change the way we live in the next 20 years? What new possibilities could arise from combining AI, robotics, and gaming technology?

NVIDIA is a technology company that has helped make video games, movies, and even self-driving cars better. The company is known for creating graphics cards, which are pieces of equipment that help computers show images, videos, and games on screens. But how did this company become so important? Let's look at the story of Jensen Huang, the founder and leader of NVIDIA.

Jensen Huang was born in Taiwan in 1963, and later moved to the United States. He is the founder and CEO of NVIDIA, which means he started the company and is in charge of making big decisions. He had a dream of using computers to help make things look more realistic, like in movies and video games. He wanted to create technology that could make computer images look more detailed and lifelike.

In 1993, Jensen Huang and his friends Chris Malachowsky and Curtis Priem started NVIDIA in California. At first, they worked on creating graphics cards for computers. This was important because many computers at the time didn't have good graphics, so video games and other images looked blurry or basic. Jensen and his team wanted to make graphics that were much better and looked real, like you were in the game itself!

NVIDIA's first big breakthrough came when they created a
