Personality Development in Children Ira Iscoe, Harold W. Stevenson, 2014-06-13 This book presents penetrating observations by six authorities on the personality development of children for the enlightenment of parents, teachers and others who have a vital interest in children. In the first paper, the late Harold E. Jones, a professor of psychology and the director of the Institute of Human Development at the University of California, examines the development of personality over a long period of time. He discusses the child-rearing practices used with a number of babies; then follows through with observations made several years later to see the effects of these practices. In another paper, John E. Anderson, a professor of psychology at the University of Minnesota and the former director of the Institute of Child Development and Welfare, there supports the theory that valid predictions of future personality adjustment can be made through an assessment of the present status of an individual. Anderson's findings are based on the results of tests administered to children of Nobles County, Minnesota, during the period 1950-1957 and on teacher-community pupil ratings of these children. Still other papers offer a variety of ideas. Dr. Milton J. E. Senn, Sterling Professor of Pediatrics and Psychiatry and the director of the Child Study Center at Yale University, suggests that there be greater harmony and more exchange of thought among people working toward a proper understanding of human nature. To a degree, this entire book follows his suggestion. Among several noteworthy observations made by Stanford University Professor of Psychology, Robert R. Sears, is the point that the development of conscience depends largely upon whether a child is loved or rejected by his or her parents. John W. M. Whiting, professor of education and director of the Laboratory for Human Development at Harvard University, discusses among other problems the question of why children like to play grown up roles and what happens when they are not permitted to do so Orville Brim a sociologist at the Russell Sage Foundation of New York City explains personality in terms of demands holding that one's personality changes from situation to situation and from person to person Wings of Confidence- A Comprehensive Guide to Personality Development for Cabin Crew Ms. Priyanka Kedar, 2025-05-01 Personality development is a cornerstone of success in the aviation industry particularly for cabin crew professionals who represent the face of their airline This book is designed to equip aspiring cabin crew members with the skills and attributes necessary to excel in this dynamic role It explores essential aspects such as communication teamwork cultural competence and personal branding tailored specifically to the unique demands of the aviation sector By focusing on both professional and personal growth this guide aims to help individuals cultivate confidence adaptability and a positive attitude traits that are indispensable for creating memorable passenger experiences In today's competitive landscape a well developed personality goes beyond physical appearance or technical skills it embodies the ability to connect empathize and lead in high pressure situations This book serves as a roadmap for students and professionals to unlock their full potential combining practical insights with relatable examples Through these pages readers will gain the tools to build resilience enhance their interpersonal skills and develop a professional image that aligns with industry standards With this knowledge aspiring cabin crew members can take confident strides toward a fulfilling career in aviation leaving a lasting impression on passengers and colleagues alike
