

EARLY BACKING FOR A MORE PERFECT CONSTITUTION

—THOMAS JEFFERSON—

"No society can make a perpetual constitution, or even a perpetual law. The earth belongs always to the living generation . . . Every constitution, then, and every law, naturally expires at the end of 19 years. If it be enforced longer, it is an act of force and not of right."

—in a letter to James Madison from Paris, September 6, 1789

—JAMES MADISON—

"It would give me singular pleasure to see [this principle] first announced in the proceedings of the U. States, and always kept in their view, as a salutary curb on the living generation from imposing unjust or unnecessary burdens on their successors."

—responding to Jefferson's letter from New York, February 4, 1790

—GEORGE WASHINGTON—

"The warmest friends and best supporters the Constitution has, do not contend that it is free from imperfections; but they found them unavoidable and are sensible, if evil is likely to arise there from, the remedy must come hereafter, for in the present moment, it is not to be obtained; and as there is a Constitutional door open for it, I think the People (for it is with them to Judge) can as they will have the advantage of experience on their Side, decide with as much propriety on the alterations and amendments which are necessary [as] ourselves. I do not think we are more inspired, have more wisdom, or possess more virtue, than those who will come after us."

—in a letter to Bushrod Washington, November 10, 1797

—GEORGE MASON—

"That government is, or ought to be, instituted for the common benefit, protection, and security of the people, nation, or community; of all the various modes and forms of government, that is best which is capable of producing the greatest degree of happiness and safety. . . ; and, whenever any government shall be found inadequate or contrary to these purposes, a majority of the community hath an indubitable, inalienable, and indefeasible right to reform, alter, or abolish it, in such manner as shall be judged most conducive to the public weal."

—in Article One of Virginia's original constitution, 1776

—THOMAS JEFFERSON—

"I hold it that a little rebellion now and then is a good thing, and as necessary in the political world as storms in the physical."

—in a letter to James Madison, January 30, 1787
