Pattern Synthesis: Lectures in Pattern Theory, Vol. 1. By U. GRENANDER, Applied Mathematical Sciences No. 18, Springer-Verlag, New York, 1976, 509 pp.

"Pattern Synthesis" is the first volume of a series of three, which Professor Ulf Grenander intends to devote to a study of "the patterns themselves in terms of a precise formalism which will serve as the conceptual basis for synthesizing and analyzing patterns, helping us to understand how they are formed and processed" (p. 2). This is certainly an ambitious and distant goal, and it is not clear at all whether it can be reached using solely the languages of mathematics and deductive reasoning, rather than by using a mixture of philosophical, biophysical, phenomenological, and epistemological structures or symbolisms (Aristote, Kant, Bergson). The reader may therefore be well advised to look upon himself as a Sunday stroller walking around in the perceptual world of patterns with his brand-new unused tool case (this book), testing these tools casually each time his curiosity awakens; he may obtain rewards through this process, but he should not really care if many tools fit inadequately, because they probably ought to be used a bit first, and the users manual ought to be simplified.

Grenander's generative pattern world is defined entirely by the following elements:

(a) Primitive patterns $g \in G$, called generators, linked to other generators through oriented connections called bonds; each generator can generally be considered as isomorphic to mappings $g: X \rightarrow Y$, where X is the background space and Y is the pure image space; generators are studied in Chapter 1.

(b) Regular configurations c of generators, specified by their content (independent of the bonds), and their structure $\sigma \in \mathcal{Z}$, where $\mathcal{Z}$ is the set of allowable connections between the bonds; the bond agreement relation operator is noted ρ ; configurations are studied in Chapter 2.

(c) Observation or identification relations R between configurations, inducing pure images as being equivalence classes $I \in (Y/R)$; R cannot discriminate among configurations $c \in I$ for which the connections fit the bond structure σ ; algebras $\mathfrak{I} \in (Y/R)$ of pure images are defined, and are studied in Chapter 3.

(d) Deformations $d \in D$ of the pure images I , considered as mappings of
