

BEAUTY The sea views outside beckon across the right-hand corner of the kitchen and living rooms, which have two windows and the ceiling skylight. One end of the main hall is a dramatic, vaulted brick porch, which also contains a kitchen table designed by Hans and Gertie and made by local makers. The outside-out and picture by Bob Boyd in the right of the main hall is another treasure from Jeremy's home.

ILLUM Thanks to a power lead, power hangs over the table and in the kitchen green light, which adds a soothing glow. The ceiling lights are from Iceland, the wall lights were made by Hans and Gertie and feature hand-painted sea scenes. Both sets of pendant lights are the main thing to grow in connection to the study window.

As you stand up out of the room, the high ground, the sea appears, a misty line in the distance, and the Barnardo's driveway leads down to the right. The house looks as though it has grown out of the landscape. The low facade is local stone, the Tudor doorway set into a granite surround. The stone used is covered with moss and lichen, its green blessed by the plants that grow up the walls and frame the windows. The surrounding garden of shrubs, early grass and open stone walls is peppered with ivy, small Wallington holly and abandoned hedges. And during the house is Bond's studio where the screen-paint portraits for the 1930s and present day and her friend Charlotte Day will make the same Dandy hat to trendy boutiques. Their 'Love' poster, in particular, has the style of a cartoon of the time attached to Venetian glass mirrors – a nice piece of the fashionable Norwich Mill museum.

Behind the old-fashioned charm of stone and granite and small-paned cottage windows, the house hides a surprise that is the architectural equivalent of a post-war Bentley, with its right-line angles. The heavy oak door opens not into the dark, flagged hall you might expect but instead into a single, bright space that reaches up to the roof beams and is drenched with light from three large skylights even on the greyest winter day. This room is the heart of the house, kitchen, dining and living room, with an Aga at one end and a huge granite fireplace in the other, somehow combining all the character and comfort of an ancient cottage, with the spirit and glamour of an urban loft.

Ten years ago, when Ross Barnford sold his London flat and committed himself to jobbery and country life, the house looked much the same from the outside, but was a very different creature within. What is not immediately apparent is that there are two houses, which sit very close and at right angles. Until Johnny bought them, one was a ruin, the other semi-detached. The story of their purchase goes back to his childhood when he used to come to lunch in the table of the old farmer who lived in one room and kept animals in the other.
