

Then I tell them when the answer is something not being a case. I give them the fact the number is small. It's better, really, something is wrong.

When a customer has a standard order, the WMS is configured to create a unique barcode for each component item. The barcode is then affixed to the component. The barcode is used to track the component through the supply chain. The barcode is also used to track the component's location in the warehouse. The barcode is also used to track the component's status (e.g., in stock, out of stock, etc.).
