the reading process and two to help educators to interpret and apply theory and research data to everyday classroom teaching as well as to the problems encountered frequently in developmental and remedial teaching

Early Reading Instruction Diane McGuinness, 2006-01-20 Early Reading Instruction is a comprehensive analysis of the research evidence from early writing systems to computer models of reading In this book Diane McGuinness provides an innovative solution to the reading war the century old debate over the efficacy of phonics sound based versus whole word meaning based methods She has developed a prototype a set of elements that are critical to the success of a reading method McGuinness shows that all writing systems without exception are based on a sound unit in the language This fact and other findings by paleographers provides a platform for the prototype Other elements of the prototype are based on modern research For example observational studies in the classroom show that time spent on three activities strongly predicts reading success learning phoneme symbol correspondences practice at blending and segmenting phonemes in words and copying writing words phrases and sentences Most so called literacy activities have no effect and some like sight word memorization have a strongly negative effect The National Reading Panel 2000 summarized the research on reading methods after screening out thousands of studies that failed to meet minimum scientific standards In an in depth analysis of this evidence McGuinness shows that the most successful methods children reading a year or more above age norms include all the elements in the prototype Finally she argues because phonics type methods are consistently shown to be superior to whole word methods in studies dating back to the 1960s it makes no sense to continue this line of research The most urgent question for future research is how to get the most effective phonics programs into the classroom

Intensifying Classroom Routines in Reading and Writing Programs Michael P. Ford, 2017-06-15 Three common routines are seen in almost every primary language arts programs morning messages shared readings and word walls These routines should be integrated to support the total language arts program but are teachers of grades K 2 getting the most bang for their buck out of these activities Morning messages can become very routinized and repeat the same experiences over and over again Shared readings are sometimes conducted with little variation in spite of changing demands from the texts being used and changing needs in the learners with whom they are being used Word walls might be put up with some attention early in the year and remain virtually unchanged as the year moves forward Intensifying Classroom Routines in Reading and Writing Programs focuses on how teachers can get more instructional mileage out of these three common classroom routines Author Michael P Ford lays out step by step day by day plans to put those three key routines on a cycle that changes as students move through developmental phases This resource helps teachers plan for emergent and early readers and writers It also looks at how teachers can assist students as they move through critical areas including concepts of print alphabetic knowledge phonological awareness sound symbol relationships high frequency words structural analysis context clues comprehension strategies and composition strategies With these intensified routines in place students will clearly see connections between reading and writing
