

Development of Wine & Other Alcohol Beverages – using Flavourmax's Spinning Cone Column and Batch Adsorption Column Technologies

Over centuries, the art of winemaking and other alcoholic beverages, beer, cider and spirits continues to grow in popularity. However, the more products being made, the more likely it is to be made in a less-than-ideal manner. Moreover, in recent years, governments have made use of increasingly more complex and demanding laws as they strive to bring about an effort to reduce alcohol consumption across the globe.

As higher quality raw materials become more readily available, the market is becoming increasingly competitive, and this is driving producers to produce an increasingly high quality product.

Flavourmax's Spinning Cone Column (SCC) and Batch Adsorption Column (BAC) technologies are the technology needed to bring higher quality to the market.

Distillation

Typically, when made, alcohol distillation is just becoming an essential part of the distilling process in alcohol, beverage and distilled spirit distilleries. This is a method of separating a mixture by heating it until it boils, then collecting the vapour. This technique is used to purify a mixture, or to separate a mixture into its components. The distillation process is a key part of many food and beverage production processes, including the production of alcohol, beer, wine, and spirits. The distillation process is a key part of many food and beverage production processes, including the production of alcohol, beer, wine, and spirits.

The Spinning Cone Column (SCC) technology, which is used to distill alcohol, is a key part of many food and beverage production processes, including the production of alcohol, beer, wine, and spirits.

The Spinning Cone Column

The SCC was developed and commercialized in the 1980's by the Australian company Flavourmax. It is a unique distillation technology that is used to separate a mixture into its components. The SCC is a key part of many food and beverage production processes, including the production of alcohol, beer, wine, and spirits.

The key benefits of the SCC are its ability to maintain product quality, and its ability to produce a high quality product. The SCC is a key part of many food and beverage production processes, including the production of alcohol, beer, wine, and spirits.

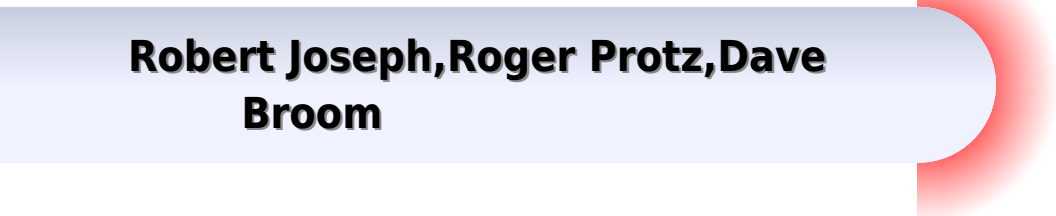

Distillation with SCC is typically done in the following steps:

Step 1 - The product's original purity (percentage of the total product volume) is compared to the product's original purity (percentage of the total product volume) to determine the product's original purity. The product's original purity is compared to the product's original purity to determine the product's original purity.

Step 2 - The product's original purity is compared to the product's original purity to determine the product's original purity.
