Armour,2023-07-04 Social media platforms are often denounced as bubbles or echo chambers In this view what we see tends to reinforce what we already believe and what we already believe shapes what we see Yet social movements such as Black Lives Matter rely heavily on the widespread dissemination of digital photographs and videos through social media In at least some cases visual images can challenge normative and normalized ways of grasping the world and prompt their viewers to see differently and even bring people together Seeing and Believing marshals religious resources to recast the significance of digital images in the struggle for social justice Ellen T Armour examines what distinguishes digital photography from its analogue predecessor and places the circulation of digital images in the broader context of virtual visual cultures She explores the challenges and opportunities that visually saturated social media landscapes present for users and organizers Despite the power of digital platforms and algorithms possibilities for disruption and resistance emerge from how people engage with these systems Armour offers ways of seeing drawn from Christianity and found in other religious traditions to help us break with entrenched habits and rethink how we engage with the images that grab our attention Developing theological perspectives on the power and peril of photography and technology Seeing and Believing provides suggestions for navigating the new media landscape that can spark what Armour calls photographic insurrection

Crime and Deviance in Cyberspace David S. Wall,2017-07-05 This volume presents the reader with an interesting and at times provocative selection of contemporary thinking about cybercrimes and their regulation The contributions cover the years 2002 2007 during which period internet service delivery speeds increased a thousand fold from 56kb to 56mb per second When combined with advances in networked technology these faster internet speeds not only made new digital environments more easily accessible but they also helped give birth to a completely new generation of purely internet related cybercrimes ranging from spamming phishing and other automated frauds to automated crimes against the integrity of the systems and their content In order to understand these developments the volume introduces new cybercrime viewpoints and issues but also a critical edge supported by some of the new research that is beginning to challenge and surpass the hitherto journalistically driven news stories that were once the sole source of

Douglas Crawford, 2016-12-07 One remarkable ability of the human brain is to process large amounts of information about our surroundings to allow us to interact effectively with them. In everyday life, the most common way to interact with objects is by reaching, grasping, lifting, and manipulating them. Although these may sound like simple tasks, the perceptual properties of the target object, such as its location, size, shape, and orientation, all need to be processed in order to set the movement parameters that allow an accurate reach-to-grasp-to-lift movement. Several brain areas work in concert to process this outstanding amount of visual information and drive the execution of a motor plan in just a few hundred milliseconds. How are these processes orchestrated? In developing this type of comprehensive knowledge about the interactions between objects, perception, and goal-directed actions, we have a window into the mechanisms underlying the functioning of the visuo-motor system. With this research topic, we aim to further understand the neural mechanisms that mediate our interactions with the world. Therefore, we particularly encourage submission of papers that attempt to relate such findings to real-world situations by investigating behavioural and neural correlates of information processing related to eye-hand coordination and visually guided actions, including reaching, grasping, and lifting movements. This topic welcomes submissions of original research using any relevant techniques and methods, from behavioural kinematics, kinetics, to neuroimaging and transcranial magnetic stimulation (TMS) as well as neuropsychological studies. different aspects on planning controlling and performing locomotion and posture tasks In attempting to improve current knowledge in this field invited authors present and discuss how environmental sensorial motor cognitive and individual aspects influence the planning and performance of locomotor and postural activities The major thrust of the book is to address the mechanisms involved in controlling and planning motor action in neurological healthy individuals as well as in those who suffer from movement disorders or face the effects of aging indicating the aspects that impair locomotion and postural control In addition new technologies tools and interventions designed to manage the effects of aging and movement disorders are presented in the book Studying the English Language Louise Mullany,Peter Stockwell,2025-09-10
