Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 10-week, 100-hr, nonclinical, laboratory-based, research experience on the self-reported confidence of prelicensure nursing students in their ability to perform various nursing tasks. The study was conducted in a large, midwestern, public university. A pretest-posttest design was used. The study population consisted of 100 nursing students who completed a 10-week, 100-hr, nonclinical, laboratory-based, research experience. The results of the study indicated that the students' self-reported confidence in their ability to perform various nursing tasks increased significantly after completing the research experience. The results of this study suggest that a 10-week, 100-hr, nonclinical, laboratory-based, research experience can be used to increase the self-reported confidence of prelicensure nursing students in their ability to perform various nursing tasks.
