

Performance Assessment Task
High School Grade 2
This task challenges a student to understand and apply the concept of measurement. Students must measure an object using two different units and compare these results. Aspects of units and other objects the student may use to measure the object are taken into account. For example, the number of objects used to measure an object is taken to measure its length. The student must measure the same object with a unit of measuring an object, to measuring other object to give full measurement and make correct results.
Measurement and Data Measurement and Data Measurement and Data 2.MD.A. Measure the length of an object using two different units of different lengths that the two measurements describe how the two objects compare. Make a data table of the two objects.
Common Core State Standards Math - Mathematics of Mathematical Practices MP.2 Reason abstractly and quantitatively Mathematically proficient students make sense of quantities and their relationships in problem situations. They bring two complementary abilities to bear on problems involving quantitative relationships: the ability to decontextualize—to abstract a given situation and represent it symbolically and manipulate the representing symbols as if they have a life of their own, without necessarily attending to their reference—and the ability to contextualize, to posit an intended meaning to the mathematical processes he or she is problem solve the relationship that the symbols represent. Quantitatively reasoning entails skills of connecting a situation representation of the problem at hand, connecting the units involved, attending to the meaning of quantities, not just how to compute them, and knowing and flexibly using different properties of operations and objects.
MP.4 Model with mathematics. Mathematically proficient students can apply the mathematics they know to solve problems arising in everyday life, society, and the workplace. In early grades, this might be as simple as recognizing subtraction as related to counting on a number line. As students progress, it might involve representing a problem by a diagram or a model. By high school, a student might use geometry to solve a design problem or use a function to describe how one quantity of interest depends on another. When mathematically proficient students who can apply what they know are working on a problem, they actively look for relationships and representations to simplify a complex situation, modeling that situation with a mathematical model. They identify the important elements in a problem situation and use these relationships to bring a problem to a solution. Two-way tables, graphs, equations and functions. They can analyze these relationships mathematically to solve problems. They routinely compare their mathematical results to the context of the situation and reflect on whether the results make sense, possibly improving the model if it has not served its purpose.
Assessment Results This task was designed by the Mathematics Assessment Service and addressed aspects of a national, national math assessment. The computer-generated questions may be submitted to the results of the national assessment, including the total score provided for the task. The number of items passed, and the percent of students that scored as expected on the task. Mathematics, including the scoring rules, answer keys, and the scores of student mathematics and mathematics on the task, are included in the task packet.

Resources in Education ,1992 Reimagining Nigeria's Educational System Joseph A. Balogun,2023-09-20 This book assesses the challenges within the Nigerian educational system and provides a concrete plan to revitalize the low performing system by strengthening high stakes testing at all levels In Nigeria many citizens believe that the solution to the country s low performance in education is to eliminate high stakes standardized testing High stakes testing refers to applying standardized student achievement tests as a primary mechanism to evaluate students teachers and their school s performance This book argues that the poor quality of education and low ranking of Nigeria s educational system is not related to the negative consequences of high stakes testing but rather is due to many intrinsic factors By conducting a comparative analysis of six high performing education systems worldwide the book offers a comparative summative evaluation of the educational system and offers recommendations This book will be of interest to policymakers and scholars in the fields of African education higher education quality and global studies African studies management and administration leadership and professional development studies Joseph Abiodun Balogun is former Dean and retired Distinguished University Professor at the College of Health Sciences Chicago State University USA Visiting Professor Program Consultant at the Centre of Excellence in Reproductive Health Innovation University of Benin Nigeria and President CEO Joseph Rehabilitation Center Tinley Park Illinois USA Quality of U.S. Education Information United States.
