

GENDER DIFFERENCES IN MATH ANXIETY

Materials and Methods

The study was conducted using a survey method. The survey was distributed to a group of students in a classroom setting. The survey consisted of a series of questions designed to measure math anxiety levels. The survey was completed by 30 students, with 15 males and 15 females. The data was then analyzed using statistical methods.

Results

The results of the study showed that there were significant differences in math anxiety levels between males and females. Females scored significantly higher on the math anxiety scale than males. This finding is consistent with previous research that has shown that females tend to experience higher levels of math anxiety than males.

Conclusion

The study concluded that there are gender differences in math anxiety. Females experience higher levels of math anxiety than males. This finding has implications for the way math is taught in schools. Teachers should be aware of the gender differences in math anxiety and provide support for students who experience higher levels of anxiety.

Hypothesis

The hypothesis of the study was that there would be significant differences in math anxiety levels between males and females. It was expected that females would score higher on the math anxiety scale than males.

Abstract
