Polymeric Bioresorbable Scaffolds for Tissue Engineering Chiara Gualandi,2011-04-07 The development and application of bioactive nano structured constructs for tissue regeneration is the focus of the research summarised in this thesis Moreover a particular focus is the rational use of supercritical carbon dioxide foaming and electrospinning technologies which can lead to innovative polymeric bioresorbable scaffolds made of hydrolysable both commercial and ad hoc synthesized polyesters Mainly the author discusses the manipulation of polymer chemical structure and composition to tune scaffold physical properties and optimization of scaffold 3D architecture by a smart use of both fabrication techniques The multidisciplinary nature of this research is imperative in pursuing the challenge of tissue regeneration successfully One of the strengths of this thesis is the integration of knowledge from chemistry physics engineering materials science and biomedical science which has contributed to setting up new national and international collaborations while strengthening existing ones Pharmaceutical Bioassays Shiqi Peng,Ming Zhao,2009-11-09 The definitive compendium of bioassay procedures and applications A virtual encyclopedia of key bioassay protocols this up to date essential resource reviews the methods and applications of bioassays that quantify drug activity and evaluate the validity of pharmacological models Demonstrating the specific ways in which various pharmaceutical bioassays interpret the activity of drug molecules the book covers the evaluation and screening of drug compounds in a wide spectrum of therapeutic categories Throughout the authors use various models to link experimental observations with findings that clarify the effect of drug compounds on cellular biology and measure the pharmacological activity of chemical substances This provides an important technological platform for successful drug research and clinical therapy making Pharmaceutical Bioassays an ideal sourcebook for pharmacologists pharmaceutical and medical researchers analytical chemists toxicologists and students Just as a fundamental knowledge of pharmaceutical bioassays is vital to understanding how bioactive agents and new drugs are defined discovered and developed so too is this indispensable reference which Offers a complete reference on pharmaceutical bioassays and their specific applications in the assessment of therapies for cancer Alzheimer s diabetes epilepsy inflammation antimalarials pharmacogenomics and other major therapeutic areas Covers bioassays that measure toxicity including those for chemical toxicity and hepatotoxicity a particularly significant consideration in the development of safe and tolerable medications Highlights clinically relevant methods ideas and techniques to support any pharmaceutical researcher Suggests guidelines and systems to enhance communication between pharmacologists chemists and biologists Provides an informative analysis of pharmaceutical bioassay technologies and lab applications Novel approaches for sustainable crop yield and management of plant-parasitic nematodes Maria L. Inácio, Solveig Haukeland, Jorge M. S. Faria, 2023-10-06 Canadian Journal of Physiology and Pharmacology, 2009 Luminescence Biotechnology Knox Van Dyke, Christopher Van Dyke, Karen Woodfork, 2001-12-20 The dangers and drawbacks inherent in radioactivity based methods along with a demonstrated and dramatic increase in sensitivity have precipitated a major shift towards luminescence measurements and visualization techniques Their use has now spread even to traditional clinical environments and their applications have grown from clinical assays to Bacterial Exotoxins: How Bacteria Fight the Immune System Inka Sastalla, Denise M. Monack, Katharina F. Kubatzky, 2016-10-07 Bacterial pathogenicity factors are functionally diverse They may facilitate the adhesion and colonization of bacteria influence the host immune response assist spreading of the bacterium by e g evading recognition by immune cells or allow bacteria to dwell within protected niches inside the eukaryotic cell Exotoxins can be single polypeptides or heteromeric protein complexes that act on different parts of the cells At the cell surface they may insert into the membrane to cause damage bind to receptors to initiate their uptake or facilitate the interaction with other cell types For example bacterial superantigens specifically bind to major histocompatibility complex MHC II molecules on the surface of antigen presenting cells and the T cell receptor while cytolysins cause pore formation For intracellular activity exotoxins need to be translocated across the eukaryotic membrane Gram negative bacteria can directly inject effector proteins in a receptor independent manner by use of specialized needle apparatus such as bacterial type II III or type IV secretion systems Other methods of translocation include the phagocytic uptake of bacteria followed by toxin secretion or receptor mediated endocytosis which allows the targeting of distinct cell types Receptor based uptake is initiated by the binding of heteromeric toxin complexes to the cell surface and completed by the translocation of the effector proteins across the endosomal membrane In the cytosol toxins interact with specific eukaryotic target proteins to cause post translational modifications that often result in the manipulation of cellular signalling cascades and inflammatory responses It has become evident that the actions of some bacterial toxins may exceed their originally assumed cytotoxic function For example pore forming toxins do not only cause cytolysis but may also induce autophagy pyroptosis or activation of the MAPK pathways resulting in adjustment of the host immune response to infection and modification of inflammatory responses both locally and systemically Other recently elucidated examples of the immunomodulatory function of cell death inducing exotoxins include TcdB of Clostridium difficile which activates the inflammasome through modification of cellular Rho GTPases or the Staphylococcus toxin which activates mast cells The goal of this research topic was to gather current knowledge on the interaction of bacterial exotoxins and effector proteins with the host immune system The following 16 research and review articles in this special issue describe mechanisms of immune modification and evasion and provide an overview over the complexity of bacterial toxin interaction with different cells of the immune system Beta Amyloid: From Physiology to

LuxR Solos Are Becoming Major Players in Cell-Cell Communication in Bacteria Vittorio Venturi, Brian M.M. Ahmer, 2016-08-11 The most common quorum sensing QS system in Gram negative bacteria occurs via N acyl homoserine lactone AHLs signals An archetypical system consists of a LuxI family protein synthesizing the AHL signal which binds at quorum concentrations to the cognate LuxR family transcription factors which then control gene expression by binding to specific sequences in target gene promoters QS LuxR family proteins are approximately 250 amino acids long and made up of two domains at the N terminus there is an autoinducer binding domain whereas the C terminus contains a DNA binding helix turn helix HTH domain QS LuxRs display surprisingly low similarities 18-25% even if they respond to structurally similar AHLs 95% of LuxRs share 9 highly conserved amino acid residues six of these are hydrophobic or aromatic and form the cavity of the AHL binding domain and the remaining three are in the HTH domain With only very few exceptions the luxI R cognate genes of AHL QS systems are located adjacent to each other The sequencing of many bacterial genomes has revealed that many proteobacteria also possess LuxRs that do not have a cognate LuxI protein associated with them These LuxRs have been called orphans and more recently solos LuxR solos are widespread in proteobacterial species that possess a canonical complete AHL QS system as well as in species that do not In many cases more than one LuxR solo is present in a bacterial genome Scientists are beginning to investigate these solos Are solos responding to AHL signals If present in a bacterium which possesses a canonical AHL QS system are solos an integral part of the regulatory circuit Are LuxR solos eavesdropping on AHLs produced by neighboring bacteria Have they evolved to respond to different signals instead of AHLs and are these signals endogenously produced or exogenously provided Are they involved in interkingdom signaling by responding to eukaryotic signals Recent studies have revealed that LuxR solos are involved in several mechanisms of cell cell communication in bacteria implicating them in bacterial intraspecies and interspecies communication as well as in interkingdom signaling by responding to molecules produced by eukaryotes LuxR solos are likely to become major players in signaling since they are widespread among proteobacterial genomes and because initial studies highlight their different roles in bacterial communication This Research Topic allows scientists studying or interested in LuxR solos to report their data and or express their hypotheses and thoughts on this important and currently understudied family of signaling proteins
