Momma S Life Lessons Momma S Life Lessons:

Momma's Life Lessons Alessia Armstrong Westry, 2003 If I died tomorrow will my child be okay This is a question I find myself asking almost everyday Food clothing and shelter are not at stake I simply wanted a means to communicate Each day as my child grow there are life s lessons that he will need to know This is why I very carefully wrote Momma s Life Lessons The more one knows the more one grows As I was writing I began to think about how I learned these lessons Many of these lessons I learned as a young adult myself from my mother and other lessons I learned from some other young adults going through some critical stage in their life At this point I began to realize that not only could my child benefit from this book but other young adults as well There may be parents or other guardians that may not share with their children as much as they would like and this book given as a gift or maybe housed in a library or bookstore may be just what a child would like This book will help communicate life s lessons whether it s shared with a child by an adult or whether a child just happens to stumble upon it on their own Still there will be many lessons our children must learn on their own #Lifelessons Inger Wafer, 2017-08-16 The Legend Writer Inger Wafer is best known for her comical stage plays however LifeLessons is an awesome twist and revelation of her writing versatility Wafer calls it the Womens Guide to Getting it Right Inger goes on to say the entire book is written in the most popular form of communication of this century hashtags For the woman who just wants to get to the point Its not easy being transparent with the world especially when youre Pouring Your own Tea

Girl with a narcissistic mother CUZIC CORNEL NICOLAE,2025-03-05 And finally he felt that he was closing that chapter That he was allowing himself to move forward After he had begun to free his soul from the weight of the days spent in a relationship where everything seemed impossible he felt a subtle relief penetrating deep into his chest Life was beginning to change its rhythm Every step he took brought him closer to a new life free from the shadow of the past A chapter of his life was closing but he felt how within himself a delicate hope was growing a hope that it could be different that he could live in peace freed from everything that had held him captive One morning as he reflected on everything he had experienced a fragment of thought detached itself passing through his mind like a silent shiver Her forgiveness could he forgive her In his mind forgiveness seemed an idea shrouded in contradiction a terrain of ambiguity like an illusion that he could move on yet at the same time he felt that something was keeping him tied to that cruelty to that pain I could forgive you he thought if I knew that you could love me But these words were already a paradox an impossibility in both senses First of all she could not love him Her love was a distorted shadow of true love a wrong love learned and cultivated incorrectly Her love was tied to manipulation control putting herself above everything else and he knew now that he could never expect a pure gesture from her Her love was not a gift it was a bargaining chip a manipulation through which she tried to control the world around her But he also had his own struggle How could he forgive her without that unconditional love that deep within himself he desired How could he ask for forgiveness from himself if he could not close that circle of true love that love that should not have to be earned or conditioned by any promise He knew that in order to forgive her he needed to feel that real and sincere love but which he could never find in her And so he remained caught between two worlds one in which she could not love the way she should have and another in which he could not forgive her without

Reading/Speaking/Writing the Mother Text; Essays on Caribbean Women's Writing Cristina Herrera, Paula Sanmartín, 2015-08-01 While scholarship on Caribbean women's literature has grown into an established discipline there are not many studies explicitly connected to the maternal subject matter and among them only a few book length texts have focalized motherhood and maternity in writings by Caribbean women Reading Speaking Writing the Mother Text Essays on Caribbean Women's Writing encourages a crucial dialogue surrounding the state of motherhood scholarship within the Caribbean literary landscape to call for attention on a theme that although highly visible remains understudied by academics. While this collection presents a similar comparative and diasporic approach to other book length studies on Caribbean women's writing it deals with the complexity of including a wider geographical linguistic ethnic and generic diversity while exposing the myriad ways in which Caribbean women authors shape and construct their texts to theorize motherhood mothering maternity and mother daughter relationships.
