Regional Office for the Western Pacific,2006 The severe acute respiratory syndrome virus SARS first emerged in southern China in November 2002 and in the following months spread to 12 other countries in the Western Pacific region where 95 per cent of the global cases took place with devastating force By July 2004 when the epidemic was finally declared over it had killed nearly 800 people including many healthcare workers Although by some standards this first emerging and readily transmissible disease of the 21st century was not a big killer it caused more fear and social disruption than any other outbreak of our time Written largely by the public health experts and scientists involved in efforts to control the epidemic this publication examines the emergence and spread of SARS the public health measures taken to deal with it the epidemiology of the SARS coronavirus SAR CoV and vaccine development and its impact on people and economies in individual countries in the region and around the world Rhetoric of a Global Epidemic Huiling Ding,2014-04-17 2016 CCCC Best Book Award in Technical and Scientific Communication In the past ten years we have seen great changes in the ways government organizations and media respond to and report on emerging global epidemics The first outbreak to garner such attention was SARS severe acute respiratory syndrome In Rhetoric of a Global Epidemic Huiling Ding uses SARS to explore how various cultures and communities made sense of the epidemic and communicated about it She also investigates the way knowledge production and legitimation operate in global epidemics the roles that professionals and professional communicators as well as individual citizens play in the communication process points of contention within these processes and possible entry points for ethical and civic intervention Focusing on the rhetorical interactions among the World Health Organization the United States China and Canada Rhetoric of a Global

Epidemic investigates official communication and community grassroots risk tactics employed during the SARS outbreak. It consists of four historical cases which examine the transcultural risk communication about SARS in different geopolitical regions at different stages. The first two cases deal with risk communication practices at the early stage of the SARS epidemic when it originated in southern China. The last two cases move to transcultural rhetorical networks surrounding SARS. With such threats as SARS, avian flu, and swine flu capturing the public imagination and prompting transnational public health preparedness efforts, the need for a rhetoric of global epidemics has never been greater. Government leaders, public health officials, health care professionals, journalists, and activists can learn how to more effectively craft and manage transcultural risk communication from Ding's examination of the complex and varied modes of communication around SARS. In addition to offering a detailed case study, Rhetoric of a Global Epidemic provides a critical methodology that professional communicators can use in their investigations of epidemics and details approaches to facilitating more open participatory risk communication at all levels.

Asiaweek, 1993-05 Communicable Crises Deborah E. Gibbons, 2007-03-07 This volume advances crisis management literature and our understanding of network governance including temporary teams, task forces, and virtual organizations. It suggests that the distinction between networks and organizations is more about perception than reality.

Beijing Review, 2003 SARS in China Arthur Kleinman, James L. Watson, 2006 The SARS epidemic of 2003 was one of the most serious public health crises of our times. The event, which lasted only a few months, is best seen as a warning shot, a wake-up call for public health professionals, security officials, economic planners, and policy makers everywhere. SARS, Severe Acute Respiratory Syndrome, is one of the new epidemics. SARS in China addresses the structure and impact of the epidemic and its short and medium range implications for an interconnected globalized world. After initially stalling and prevaricating, the Chinese government managed to control SARS before it became a global catastrophe, an accomplishment that required political will and national mobilization. Recent warnings from the World Health Organization (WHO) and the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) regarding avian flu make it clear that SARS may have been a prelude to bigger things. The contributors to this volume include a journalist, WHO's representative in Beijing, and health care professionals, several of whom found themselves on the frontlines of the battle to understand and control SARS. Their vivid first-hand accounts encouraged other contributors to go beyond the boundaries of their respective disciplines and write for a wide audience. The authors of this volume focus on specific aspects of the SARS outbreak: epidemiological, political, economic, social, cultural, and moral. They analyze SARS as a form of social suffering and raise questions about the relevance of national sovereignty in the face of such global threats. Taken together, these essays demonstrate that SARS had the potential of becoming a major turning point in human history This book thus poses a question of the greatest possible significance Can we learn from SARS before the next pandemic Contributors Erik Eckholm Joan Kaufman Arthur Kleinman Dominic Lee Sing Lee Megan Murray Thomas G Rawski Tony Saich Alan Schnur James L Watson Hong Zhang Yun Kwok Wing Worldwide Travel Information
