Hollywood Arensberg Mark Nelson, William H. Sherman, Ellen Hoobler, 2020-10-06 This comprehensive reconstruction and interpretation of Louise and Walter Arensberg's groundbreaking collection of modern and pre-Columbian art takes readers room by room wall by wall object by object through the couple's Los Angeles home in which their collection was displayed. Following the Armory Show of 1913, Louise and Walter Arensberg began assembling one of the most important private collections of art in the United States as well as the world's largest private library of works by and about the philosopher Sir Francis Bacon. By the time Louise and Walter died in 1953 and 1954 respectively, they had acquired some four thousand rare books and manuscripts and nearly one thousand works of art, including world-class specimens of Cubism, Surrealism, and Primitivism, the bulk of Marcel Duchamp's oeuvre, and hundreds of pre-Columbian objects. These exceptional works filled nearly all available space in every room of their house, including the bathrooms. The Arensbergs have long had a central role in the histories of Modernism and collecting, but images of their collection in situ have never been assembled or examined comprehensively until now. Presenting new research on how the Arensbergs acquired pre-Columbian art and featuring never-before-seen images, Hollywood Arensberg demonstrates the value of seeing the Arensbergs' collection as part of a single vision framed by a unique domestic space at the heart of Hollywood's burgeoning artistic scene. This publication has been generously supported by Furthermore, a program of the J. M. Kaplan fund.

Macgregor,2011-03-15 So how do Americans in a small town make community today This book argues that there is more than one answer and that despite the continued importance of small town stuff traditionally associated with face to face communities it makes no sense to think that contemporary technological economic and cultural shifts have had no impact on the ways Americans practice community life Instead I found that different Viroquans took different approaches to making community that reflected different confluences of moral logics their senses of obligation to themselves to their families to Viroqua and to the world beyond it and about the importance of exercising personal agency The biggest surprise was that these ideas about obligation and agency and specifically about the degree to which it was necessary or good to try to bring one s life into precise conformance with a set of larger goals turned out to have replaced more traditional markers of social belonging like occupation and ethnicity in separating Viroquans into social groups from Habits of the HeartlandAlthough most Americans no longer live in small towns images of small town life and particularly of the mutual support and neighborliness to be found in such places remain powerful in our culture In Habits of the Heartland Lyn C Macgregor investigates how the residents of Viroqua Wisconsin population 4 355 create a small town community together Macgregor lived in Viroqua for nearly two years During that time she gathered data in public places attended meetings volunteered for civic organizations talked to residents in their workplaces and homes and worked as a bartender at the local American Legion post Viroqua has all the outward hallmarks of the idealized American town the kind of place where local merchants still occupy the shops on Main Street and everyone knows everyone else On closer examination one finds that the town contains three largely separate social groups Alternatives Main Streeters and Regulars These categories are not based on race or ethnic origins Rather social distinctions in Viroqua are based ultimately on residents ideas about what a community is and why it matters These ideas both reflect and shape their choices as consumers whether at the grocery store as parents of school age children or in the voting booth Living with and listening to the town s residents taught Macgregor that while traditional ideas about community especially as it was connected with living in a small town still provided an important organizing logic for peoples lives there were a variety of ways to understand and create community Farmer's Advocate,1912
