

Development of Wine & Other Alcohol Beverages – using Flavourmax's Spinning Cone Column and Batch Adsorption Column Technologies

Over centuries, the art of winemaking and other alcoholic beverages, beer, cider and spirits continues to grow in popularity. However, the more products being readily drunk by consumers is exactly what is required. However, in recent years, governments have made use of regulations that increasingly has increased and determined limits on alcohol being drunk as an effort to reduce alcohol consumption across the globe.

As higher quality raw materials become more readily available, the market is becoming increasingly competitive, and this is increasing pressure on producers to produce high quality products.

Flavourmax's Spinning Cone Column (SCC) and Batch Adsorption Column (BAC) technologies are the technology needed to meet high quality targets for alcohol.

Distillation

Typically, further levels, added distillation is used resulting in removal part of the desirable products or solvent, impurities and distillates around the globe. This is a method of separation available for removing solvent from wine, beer, cider and spirits. These distillates include methanol, ethanol, partial solvent degradation, and (most common) distillates with the same being widely considered the quality and more efficient process.

The Spinning Cone Column, Flavourmax's, continuously distillates at low temperatures and does not require extra time resulting in high throughput of product and value.

The Spinning Cone Column

The SCC was developed and commercialised in the 1980's by the Australian company Flavourmax, with its unique ability to gently and efficiently remove volatile components from all kinds of chemical, natural or other liquids. It was specifically designed as an ideal method for isolating alcohol in wine and beer.

The key attributes of the SCC is its ability to maintain product quality, and with spinning distillation of between 20-40°C, reduces stress on the liquid and its aroma, and the ability to produce highly pure products. The SCC is considered the best choice.

Distillation with SCC is typically done in the following steps:

Step 1 - The product's original purity (approximately 70% of the initial product volume) is compared from the product of around 20-40°C by using 20 seconds' treatment in a heat exchanger, heated and cooled for no more than a few days.

Step 2 - The entire original product is then re-produced at around 20-40°C by using the SCC. The product is removed from the SCC at the desired alcohol level. In the product setting, the SCC will typically be between 20-40°C and 40-60°C, with the product being adjusted depending on requirements. Additionally, the product removed is in the form of a high-quality spirit that can be sold, used in other applications or unaltered through another of Flavourmax's technologies.
