

CREATING CREATURES

THE CONCEPT

To help our adventure have a creature it featured and why, let's look at a simple creature and why its abilities might be useful.

THE REQUIREMENTS

We want it attack a single opponent centered by its body. It should be able to move quickly.

WHAT DO WE NEED?

The creature should be quick and have the ability to destroy enemies with immunity to them.

HOW DO WE FIND SUCH A CREATURE?

For the first we need to look for a hybrid creature with the abilities we need. If none exists, we can the Animal Selection system to find two great animals that have the desired abilities and then use the Creature Builder to join them into a single hybrid. Once we've found an interesting hybrid, we can the Animal Builder to add it to our army.

WHAT DID WE CHOOSE?

In our scenario, the scorpion and the cheetah were combined into a creature called a Cheetah. We chose the scorpion for its tail and sting as our creature would have a sting and pincers. We chose the cheetah for its fast and back legs as our creature would possess high speed and leap ability.

WHAT WERE ITS STRENGTHS?

The picture gives our creature the ability to destroy enemies, as well as immunity to the effects of grenades. The sting can be used to debilitate enemy units in close combat. The creature's ability to run fast helps it get out of the way of an attack quickly, and, if needed, can use its leap ability to strike first in close combat. The cheetah would be good for hit and run attacks.

In the scenario we addressed only the creature's combat abilities. When choosing a unit to combine, it is also important to consider health, sight radius, cost, research, and so on.

WHAT WERE ITS VULNERABILITIES?

Like the cheetah and the scorpion is a very big animal, leaving its ability to certain attack units has good sight radius but is able over long distances. Therefore, the Cheetah would be a good unit. It would be at risk to ranged units that could quickly take it out from a line before it could reach. It lacks the power or toughness to make a frontal assault.
