

GREAT STORE DESIGN

A photograph of a clothing store interior. The walls are lined with tall, dark wooden bookshelves filled with books of various colors. In the foreground, a mannequin is dressed in a light green, short-sleeved, belted dress. To the right, two more mannequins are displayed: one in a dark blue, belted dress and another in a bright yellow, belted dress. The floor is dark and polished. The ceiling features recessed lighting. The overall atmosphere is modern and sophisticated.

Great Store Design Natalie Hantze, 2015 Glamorous fascinating and sometimes even magical the flagship stores of the biggest brands combine interior design and product presentation to create a unique melange of style and image Stores serve as a window into a very special world whether they are a concept store pop up store or a shrine to the brand The days are long gone when they were merely a sales floor brands in the fashion automotive beauty and lifestyle sectors want to inspire shoppers with their spirit This is what turns customers into diehard fans Store design is the great art of staging and communicating a brand's values and the supreme method of anchoring your brand in a customer's mind over the long term As our daily activities move increasingly into the virtual sphere people long for things that are accessible and approachable Retailers must fight an increasingly difficult battle with online providers to win customers A sophisticated mix of a wide variety of materials spaces designed with eclectic ingredients or luxurious accents and elegant lighting solutions become vehicles that convey the heart and image of a brand and create tactile and visual experiences for shoppers In this manner shops become event locations favourite hangouts and in the very best cases a kind of living room for customers and friends This opulent book shows the most amazing stores talks to brand makers and creative artists and designers and offers unique insights into the previously unknown world of brand design Brands want to move us and more and more stores are where the magic happens AUTHOR Natalie Hantze is Editor in Chief of Design Lodge magazine For more than 15 years she has been consulting with companies in trade industry and the media as well as design firms in every area of brand positioning and communications SELLING POINTS Dive into the world of high end luxury shops with unique interior design Peek behind the scenes of world renowned brands with this lavishly illustrated coffee table book A must for any shopaholic or lover of extraordinary design 200 colour Creating Offline Space for Online Brands: A Warby Parker Retail Store in Washington, D.C. Natalie Grasso, 2013 Online only retailers have begun to experiment with physical locations due to the fact that there are certain items that customers will always want to touch feel and try on This cannot be replicated online This creates new obligations of space for the brands that were initially conceived to occupy virtual space only These companies have discovered that physical retail stores showrooms and pop ups are where every dimension of their brand comes alive Such is the case for Warby Parker an eyewear company that was launched online in 2010 By subverting traditional channels Warby Parker sells their vintage inspired frames for a fraction of typical designer costs prescription lenses included They've seen tremendous success in their two years of existence and have become a highly disruptive brand This thesis will explore the ways in which brands like Warby Parker can and do manifest physically It draws connections between the act of wearing a pair of Warby Parker's vintage inspired frames and theatrical performance and exploits and distorts the traditional program of a theater space to create a totally new kind of retail experience for Warby Parker customers Store Design William R. Green, William R Green, B.Arch, J.D., 2012-09-04 Retail design is different It's a specialty When done well it works like magic
