

on the deck or bulkheads which have obstacles on the opposite side, Cutting extinguisher Attack Points (CAPs) were marked at pre-defined places: a white S on a bright red field²².

When it comes to procedures, the third action encompasses the cutting extinguisher attack, thus called Second Attack:

1. Early Detection - Alarm
2. Initial Attack - First Attack
3. Containment & Control - Second Attack
4. BA-Attack - Safe Re-entry Procedure²³

The initial two actions are the same as in standard shipboard firefighting procedures, they are also the same independently whether it is an incident onboard a composite vessel or a steel hull vessel.

The third step has the cutting extinguishing method included as a first choice or as a complement to fixed installed fire suppressive systems – depending on the assessment of the situation. At the same time, on steel ships, boundary cooling is prepared, but not executed. Boundary cooling is executed on command of the DCO. If the fixed installed fire suppression systems fail, redundant measures are of essence.²⁴
