

REPORT OF ACTIVITIES

2013-14

Introduction

At Maths on Toast, we transform attitudes to mathematics by making it family fun. Our creative events and activities broaden perceptions of what maths is; showing it as social, human, and, above all, fun and achievable.

During our second year, we have focused on consolidating what we do, broadening our audiences and building our networks. We have become more financially sustainable, and improved the mechanisms we use to measure the impact of our work. We have increased our profile within the mathematics community, and we have built new partnerships, which are enabling us to bring maths to families in unusual, innovative and, of course, fun ways.

Attitudes to maths are often inherited, so we work with children, their parents, teachers and the community, using arts and craft-based projects to create positive experiences of maths. We continue to draw on extensive research which documents the positive impact of parental involvement in children's learning, and we have deliberately partnered with schools and community organisations in order to attract people with a range of backgrounds.

A highlight of the year has been our partnership with the London Borough of Camden, which has enabled us to bring our event, the "Festival of Triangles", to over 200 people in a major London borough. This opportunity enabled us to develop the event to run successfully in a range of community settings, and start building what we hope will be long-standing relationships with Camden organisations and residents.

Only 62% of parents signing into one of our Camden events said when asked about their feelings towards maths that they 'Love it – wish I did more'. The others were either neutral, actively avoided maths, or didn't answer.

91% of parents who completed a feedback card at the end of an event said they had enjoyed it. When asked if the activities had been related to maths, 94% of parents answered 'Yes' or gave a 4 or 5 rating.

Necessary Evil David Kinley, 2018-02-01 Finance is the evil we cannot live without It governs almost every aspect of our lives and has the power to liberate as well as enslave With the world's total financial assets valued at a staggering 300 trillion being four times larger than the combined output of all the world's economies there is apparently plenty to go around Yet while proponents of finance driven capitalism point to the trickle down effect as its contribution to wealth redistribution there are still nearly a billion people across the globe existing on less than 2 a day 14 percent of Americans are living below the official poverty line and disparities in wealth equality everywhere have reached unprecedented levels Evidently a trickle is not enough How can this be when so much wealth abounds and when finance is supposedly chastened and reformed after its latest global crisis How especially can it be in an age when human rights are more loudly proclaimed than ever before Can the financial sector be made to shoulder more of the burden of spreading wealth reducing poverty and protecting rights And if so what role can human rights play in making it happen In answering these questions David Kinley draws on a vast array of material from bankers economists lawyers and politicians as well as human rights activists philosophers historians and anthropologists alongside his own experiences working in the field Necessary Evil shows how finance can shed its conceit return to its role as the economy's servant not its master and regain the public trust and credibility it has so spectacularly lost over the past decade all by helping human rights not harming them
