iTake-Over David Arditi, 2020-06-23 The second edition of iTake Over The Recording Industry in the Streaming Era sheds light on the way large corporations appropriate new technology to maintain their market dominance in a capitalist system To date scholars have erroneously argued that digital music has diminished the power of major record labels In iTake Over sociologist David Arditi suggests otherwise adopting a broader perspective on the entire issue by examining how the recording industry strengthened copyright laws for their private ends at the expense of the broader public good Arditi also challenges the dominant discourse on digital music distribution which assumes that the recording industry has a legitimate claim to profitability at the expense of a shared culture Arditi specifically surveys the actual material effects that digital distribution has had on the industry Most notable among these is how major record labels find themselves in a stronger financial position today in the music industry than they were before the launch of Napster largely because of reduced production and distribution costs and the steady gain in digital music sales Moreover instead of merely trying to counteract the phenomenon of digital distribution the RIAA and the major record labels embraced and then altered the distribution system social commerce social collaboration shared economy innovations and mobility Rethinking Informed Consent in the Big Data Age Adam J. Andreotta, 2024-12-23 In the big data age providing informed consent online has never been more challenging. Countless companies collect and share our personal data through devices, apps, and websites, fuelling a growing data economy and the emergence of surveillance capitalism. Few of us have the time to read the associated privacy policies and terms and conditions, and thus are often unaware of how our personal data are being used. This is a problem as in the last few years large tech companies have abused our personal data. As privacy self-management through the mechanism of providing online consent has become increasingly difficult, some have argued that surveillance capitalism and the data economy more broadly need to be overthrown. This book presents a different perspective. It departs from the concept of revolutionary change to focus on pragmatic incremental solutions tailored to everyday contexts. It scrutinises how consent is currently sought and provided online and offers suggestions about how online consent practices can be improved upon. These include the possibility of subjecting consent gathering practices to ethics committees for review, the creation of visual based consent agreements, and privacy policies to help with transparency and engagement, the development of software to protect privacy, and the idea of automated consent functionalities that allow users to bypass the task of reading vast amounts of online consent agreements. The author suggests that these small scale changes to online consent obtaining procedures could, if successfully implemented, provide us with a way of self-managing our privacy in a way that avoids a revolutionary dismantling of the data economy. In the process, readers are encouraged to rethink the very purpose of providing informed consent online. Rethinking Informed Consent in the Big Data Age will appeal to researchers in normative ethics, applied ethics, philosophy of law, and the philosophy of AI. It will also be of interest to business scholars, communication researchers, students, and those in industry.
