Agroecology V. Ernesto Méndez, Christopher M. Bacon, Roseann Cohen, Stephen R. Gliessman, 2015-11-18 Agroecology A Transdisciplinary Participatory and Action oriented Approach is the first book to focus on agroecology as a transdisciplinary participatory and action oriented process Using a combined theoretical and practical approach this collection of work from pioneers in the subject along with the latest generation of acknowledged leaders Resourcing an Agroecological Urbanism Chiara Tornaghi, Michiel Dehaene, 2021-03-07 Foregrounding an innovative and radical perspective on food planning this book makes the case for an agroecological urbanism in which food is a key component in the reinvention of new and just social arrangements and ecological practices Building on state of the art and participatory research on farming urbanism food policy and advocacy in the field of food system transformation this book changes the way food planning has been conceptualised to date and invites the reader to fully embrace the transformative potential of an agroecological perspective Bringing in dialogue from both the rural and urban the producer and consumer this book challenges conventional approaches that see them as separate spheres whose problems can only be solved by a reconnection Instead it argues for moving away from a food in the city approach towards an urbanism perspective in which the economic and spatial processes that currently drive urbanisation will be unpacked and dissected and new strategies for changing those processes into more equal and just ones are put forward Drawing on the nascent field of urban political agroecology this text brings together i theoretical re conceptualisations of urbanism in relation to food planning and the emergence of new agrarian questions ii critical analysis of experimental methodologies and performing arts for public dialogue reflexivity and food sovereignty research iii experiences of resourceful land management including urban land use and land tenure change and iv theoretical and practical exploration of post capitalist economics that bring consumers and producers together to make the case for an agroecological urbanism Aimed at advanced students and academics in agroecology sustainable food planning urban geography urban planning and critical food studies this book will also be of interest to professionals and activists working with food systems in both the Global North and the Global South Critical and Equity-Oriented Pedagogical Innovations in Sustainable Food Systems Education Will Valley, Selena Ahmed, Julie Grossman, Nicholas R. presence is a remarkable feat while other movements have come and gone the MST continues to be a steadfast force in the pursuit of social justice and environmental sustainability How has the MST managed to endure in a country dominated by agribusiness and characterized by hostile politics The rationale of this collection is to answer such questions from an ethnographic standpoint connecting personal stories to theorizations of land and struggle The detailed accounts of this book's contributions sit in dialogue with the longitudinal commitment of the contributors many of whom have been working with the movement over a period of decades Such a commitment allows this book to speak to a 40 year timeframe creating an approach that points to broader conclusions and possible futures With contributors from Brazil Europe and North America this book connects lived experiences with wider political questions pertaining to global mass mobilization Offering a fresh perspective on one of the world's most iconic social movements this volume celebrates the durability of the MST and speaks to the productive tensions that characterize its lived vital and daily struggle for agrarian reform The material will be of interest to scholars of anthropology sociology political science Latin American studies and beyond

Exploring Potential Domains of Agroecological Transformation in the United States Catherine E. Horner, 2023 There is now substantial evidence that agroecology constitutes a necessary pathway towards socially just and ecologically resilient agrifood systems In the United States however agroecology remains relegated to the margins of research and policy spaces This dissertation explores three potential domains of agroecological transformation in the US Domains of transformation are sites of contestation in which agroecology interfaces with the industrial agrifood system these material and conceptual spaces may point to important pathways for scaling agroecology To explore this concept I examine formal agroecology education Chapter 1 extension services and statewide discourses around soil health Chapter 2 and models of farmland access not based on private property Chapter 3 While these constitute three distinct topics I seek to demonstrate that they are linked by similar forces that enable and constrain the extent to which these domains can be sites of agroecological transformation First I use case study methodology to explore the evolution of an advanced undergraduate agroecology course at the University of Vermont I examine how course content and pedagogy align with a transformative framing of agroecology as inherently transdisciplinary participatory action oriented and political I find that student centered pedagogies and experiential education on farms successfully promote transformative learning whereby students shift their understanding of agrifood systems and their roles within them In my second chapter I zoom out to consider soil health discourses amongst farmers and extension professionals in Vermont Using co created mental models and participatory analysis I find that a singular notion of soil health based on biological chemical and physical properties fails to capture the diverse ways in which farmers and extension professionals understand soil health I advocate for a principles based approach to soil health that includes social factors and may provide a valuable heuristic for mobilizing knowledge towards agroecology transition pathways My third chapter conducted in collaboration with the national non profit organization Agrarian Trust considers equitable farmland access Through semi structured interviews with 13 farmers and growers across the US I explore both farmer motivations for engaging with alternative land access models ALAMs and the potential roles these models may play within broader transformation processes I argue that ALAMs constitute material and conceptual third spaces within which the private property regime is challenged and new identities and language around land ownership can emerge as such

ALAMs may facilitate a re imagining of land based social ecological relationships I conclude the dissertation by identifying conceptual and practical linkages across the domains explored in Chapters 1 3 I pay particular attention to processes that challenge neoliberal logics enact plural ways of knowing and prefigure just futures In considering these concepts I apply an expansive notion of pedagogy to explore how processes of teaching and un learning can contribute to cultivating foundational capacities for transition processes

Urban Agroecology Monika Egerer, Hamutahl Cohen, 2020-12-16 Today 20 percent of the global food supply relies on urban agriculture social ecological systems shaped by both human and non human interactions This book shows how urban agroecologists measure flora and fauna that underpin the ecological dynamics of these systems and how people manage and benefit from these systems It explains how the sociopolitical landscape in which these systems are embedded can in turn shape the social ecological political and economic dynamics within them Synthesizing interdisciplinary approaches in urban agroecology in the natural and social sciences the book explores methodologies and new directions in research that can be adopted by scholars and practitioners alike With contributions from researchers utilizing both social and natural science approaches Urban Agroecology describes the current social environmental understandings of the science the movement and the practices in urban agroecology By investigating the role of agroecology in cities the book calls for the creation of spaces for food to be sustainably grown in urban spaces an Urban Agriculture UA movement Essential reading for graduate students practitioners policy makers and researchers this book charts the course for accelerating this movement

Transdisciplinary Research for Understanding and Transforming Food Systems Alexandros Gasparatos, Laura M. Pereira, Cyrille Rigolot, 2023-10-30 Food systems are currently facing tremendous challenges and changes globally On the one hand population growth urbanization and increased affluence are expected to catalyze dietary shifts and broader changes to food systems in the coming decades On the other hand food systems and changes therein have major environmental and social ramifications As a result fostering the sustainable transformation of food systems is seen as one of the major challenges for meeting the Sustainable Development Goals SDGs However understanding food systems and transforming them in a sustainable manner is far from straightforward especially as our food systems have multiple intersecting economic social technological and cultural dimensions Moreover food systems encompass different stakeholders operating at different levels with enormously different interests and worldviews
