The largest of the mammals are the various whales which ply the oceans. These have tails, small bones retained to reduce the movement of hind legs in former times. We know that these huge humpbacks, or proboscis, have two toes - used for walking on land. The whale's tail is both wider and deeper in cross-sectional, not vertical as a fish's tail. There is the strength of many horses in its stroke. It springs the whale to the surface like a volcanic island. It drives it down again like a volcanic island. At one moment the whale is breathing at the surface at normal atmospheric pressure and the next it is under a thousand metres deep, bearing a pressure of about 400 tonnes for every metre of its body.

1. The small bones near the tail of a whale show

- (a) That a whale was not always so large.
- (b) That a whale was once a land creature.
- (c) That a whale has much strength in its tail.
- (d) That a whale has a tail like a fish.
- (e) That a whale is able to swim in deep water.

2. What peculiarity has the proboscis whale?

- (a) It breathes out air before reaching the surface.
- (b) It has an extremely large mouth.
- (c) It has a double mouth.
- (d) It dives totally on land.
- (e) It can live to great depths.
