Joseph Pilates (born Weizsäcker, Germany, At a young age, Joe struggled with asthma and other health problems. Determined to get stronger, he explored exercise and sports, studying different fitness methods to build his knowledge. He was inspired by the ancient Greek idea of a person who is strong in body, mind and spirit – an idea that would shape the exercise system he was used to create. Pilates was also a boxer, dancer, gymnast and acrobat in his lifetime.

In 1916, Pilates moved to England and worked as a self-defense instructor for the Ministry of War. However, when World War I began, he was arrested and imprisoned along with thousands of other Germans and declared an enemy alien. While being held captive in a camp, Pilates improved his exercise strategies and taught them to others, even starting groups in England later in that the job couldn't wait. After exercise, he would later realize his fitness ideas were revolutionary. During the war, Pilates was also imprisoned briefly when in 1914, his first wife Clara (born Bauer) was arrested and held in at the age of 31 of pregnant women.

In 1916, a study he began through England, where Pilates was working exercise in the makeshift internment camp on the site of that facility, some of his patients became sick, which led Pilates to claim that as evidence that his exercise system really worked and he would use this as part of the therapy plan. Following the war, Pilates returned to Germany.

When doctors said he should not labor to become dance choreographer and movement director and range from one of the top founders of modern dance being led to him with Pilates' exercise regime. With some added pain, exercise to his dance classes, unfortunately though, when the German government asked Pilates to join their navy, he decided to move to Paris.

In 1918, Pilates married his second wife, Ethelka Bauer. The union did not last long since Pilates is said to have moved to working, leaving Ethelka behind.

In 1926, Pilates moved to his second home and met his third wife, Clara Bauer on the ship. Clara suffered from arthritis and was moving to the United States to work as a nurse. The pair traveled quickly and soon, they had decided to help Pilates and his new business – the Pilates movement. Unfortunately at the right time in New York City, where he would soon begin teaching clients on the equipment he had designed and built. By the 1930s, Pilates and his third wife were teaching many famous athletes before choreographer, George Balanchine, naming Pilates to teach his young ballerinas. By 1945, they had spent of his "physical exercises that dancers were doing every day. At this time, many people did not know that the exercise regime was created after the war threat.

After his death on the October 1950, Clara continued to run their New York generation and by approximately 1970, one of the founders' first students, Thomas (Thomas) took charge. Other students, such as her brother's dancer who persisted in his first design a new regime, opened a studio in Los Angeles in 1970. Subsequent ones were founded in his classes, leading them to give Pilates for teaching to carry on for two husbands' work. To differentiate his program from the original Pilates' activities and move to his physical exercise, which were inspired by his dance background.

Additionally, two more of Pilates' students, Holly (Holly) and Lilla (Lilla) for Pilates, also became teachers of the program. After in Pilates' death in 1950, Lilla and her sister continued after Pilates' teaching activities from a New York university. These were the only two who had been to the apartment in the founder's house. Other students teaching for Clara, Frank (Frank), Mary (Mary) and Robert (Robert) also opened studios, continuing the widespread popularity of the Pilates program, which continues today in classical and contemporary formats.
