Building Bodies Pamela L. Moore, 1997 Building Bodies is an exciting collection of articles that strive toward constructing theoretical models in which power, bodies, discourse, and subjectivity interact in a space we can call the built body, a dynamic, politicized, and biological site. Contributors discuss the complex relationship between body building and masculinity, between the built body and the racialized body, representations of women body builders in print and in film, and homoeroticism in body building. Linked by their focus on the sport and practice of body building, the authors in this volume challenge both the way their various disciplines—media studies, literary criticism, gender studies, film, and sociology—have gone about studying bodies and existing assumptions about the complex relationship between power, subjectivity, society, and flesh. Body building in practice, in representation, and in the cultural imagination serves as an launching point because the sport and practice provide ready challenges to existing assumptions about the built body.

The Rites of Men Varda Burstyn, 1999-01-01 It gathers more spectators on a global basis than any other activity today. More than just a game, sport has profound political and social consequences, promoting a super-aggressive ideal of manhood and political culture.

God's Gym Stephen D. Moore, 1996 In this strikingly original work, Stephen Moore considers God's male bodies: the body of Yahweh in the Hebrew Bible and the Father of Jesus Christ and Jesus himself in the New Testament, and our obsessive earthly quest for a perfect human form. God's Gym is about divinity, physical pain, and the visions of male perfectability. Weaving together his obsession with human anatomy and dissection, an interest in the technologies of torture, the cult of physical culture, and an expert knowledge of biblical criticism, Moore explains the male narcissism at the heart of the biblical God. God's Gym is an intensely personal book brimming with our culture's phobias and fascinations about male perfectability.
