Reading Comprehension

Read the passage and answer the questions.

The Great Depression was a severe economic downturn that began in 1929 and lasted until the mid-1930s. It was the longest and deepest economic recession in the history of the United States.

The Federal Reserve Board, which was created in 1914, was the first step in the government's response to the crisis. It was the first time that the government had taken direct action to control the money supply.

The Federal Reserve Board's actions were aimed at increasing the money supply and lowering interest rates. This was done by purchasing government bonds and increasing the discount rate.

The Federal Reserve Board's actions were successful in increasing the money supply and lowering interest rates. This helped to stimulate the economy and bring about a recovery.

The Federal Reserve Board's actions were also successful in bringing about a recovery in the stock market. The stock market had been in a state of panic since 1929, but it began to recover in 1933.

The Federal Reserve Board's actions were also successful in bringing about a recovery in the economy. The economy had been in a state of depression since 1929, but it began to recover in 1933.

The Federal Reserve Board's actions were also successful in bringing about a recovery in the government's finances. The government had been in a state of financial crisis since 1929, but it began to recover in 1933.
