Popular Music in a Digital Music Economy Tim Anderson, 2013-12-17 In the late 1990s the MP3 became the de facto standard for digital audio files and the networked computer began to claim a significant place in the lives of more and more listeners The dovetailing of these two circumstances is the basis of a new mode of musical production and distribution where new practices emerge This book is not a definitive statement about what the new music industry is Rather it is devoted to what this new industry is becoming by examining these practices as experiments dedicated to negotiating what is replacing an object based industry oriented around the production and exchange of physical recordings In this new economy constant attention is paid to the production and licensing of intellectual property and the rise of the social musician who has been encouraged to become more entrepreneurial Finally every element of the industry now must consider a new type of audience the end user and their productive and distributive capacities around which services and musicians must orient their practices and investments

supposed to be a bookkeeping mechanism but it becomes a goal Fraud and cheating existed in the music business like any business long before streaming happened Back when charts were based on people reporting sales numbers on phone calls those people could be bribed to say different numbers Radio DJs could be paid to pretend they were playing a song more because they just liked it Accounting could be manipulated Streaming doesn't necessarily make cheating easier overall but it definitely makes it more accessible to introverts Instead of making phone calls you can write computer programs that pretend to be streaming music listeners Piracy maintains a certain dastardly allure Streaming music fraud is not to be brutally honest the most glamorous or profitable form of dastrardry Streaming rewards accumulate in tiny micro transactions and the software necessary to laboriously accumulate micro royalties illegitimately isn't any easier to write than legal software for which you can get paid normal salaries It only really scales if you become a service provider selling fraud as a service and then you're a business with business problems instead of a pirate with a rakish eye patch and the sea air in your hair If you want to cheat your way to riches you're better off trying to do it in junk stocks or cryptocurrencies where there's way too much money sloshing around and the distinction between legitimate behavior and cheating is fuzzy So you might have thought that fraud wouldn't be a big issue in streaming Buy the book and carry on reading
