Instituting Nature Andrew S. Mathews, 2011-11-04 A study of how encounters between forestry bureaucrats and indigenous forest managers in Mexico produced official knowledge about forests and the state Greater knowledge and transparency are often promoted as the keys to solving a wide array of governance problems In Instituting Nature Andrew Mathews describes Mexico's efforts over the past hundred years to manage its forests through forestry science and biodiversity conservation He shows that transparent knowledge was produced not by official declarations or scientists expertise but by encounters between the relatively weak forestry bureaucracy and the indigenous people who manage and own the pine forests of Mexico Mathews charts the performances collusions complicities and evasions that characterize the forestry bureaucracy He shows that the authority of forestry officials is undermined by the tension between local realities and national policy officials must juggle sweeping knowledge claims and mundane concealments ambitious regulations and routine rule breaking Moving from government offices in Mexico City to forests in the state of Oaxaca Mathews describes how the science of forestry and bureaucratic practices came to Oaxaca in the 1930s and how local environmental and political contexts set the stage for local resistance He tells how the indigenous Zapotec people learned the theory and practice of industrial forestry as employees and then put these skills to use when they become the owners and managers of the area's pine forests eventually incorporating forestry into their successful claims for autonomy from the state Despite the apparently small scale and local contexts of this balancing act between the power of forestry regulations and the resistance of indigenous communities Mathews shows that it has large implications for how we understand the modern state scientific knowledge and power and for the global carbon markets for which Mexican forests might become valuable

Governing the Air Rolf Lidskog, Goran Sundqvist, 2011-10-28 Experts offer theoretical and empirical analyses that view the regulation of transboundary air pollution as a dynamic process Governing the Air looks at the regulation of air pollution not as a static procedure of enactment and agreement but as a dynamic process that reflects the shifting interrelationships of science policy and citizens Taking transboundary air pollution in Europe as its empirical focus the book not only assesses the particular regulation strategies that have evolved to govern European air but also offers theoretical insights into dynamics of social order political negotiation and scientific practices These dynamics are of pivotal concern today in light of emerging international governance problems related to climate change The contributors all prominent social scientists specializing in international environmental governance review earlier findings analyze the current situation and discuss future directions for both empirical and theoretical work The chapters discuss the institutional dimensions of international efforts to combat air pollution examining the effectiveness of CLRTAP Convention for Long Range Transboundary Air Pollution and the political complexity of the European Union offer a broad overview and detailed case studies of the roles of science expertise and learning and examine the missing link in air pollution policies citizen involvement Changing political conditions evolving scientific knowledge and the need for citizen engagement offer significant challenges for air pollution policy making By focusing on process rather than product learning rather than knowledge and strategies rather than interests this book gives a nuanced view of how air pollution is made governable

Global Institutions and Social Knowledge Virginia M. Walsh, 2004-05-21 This theoretical and empirical study examines the influence of global institutions on the generation of scientific knowledge Virginia Walsh s approach reverses the traditional focus of international relations literature which most often deals with how scientific knowledge influences institutions and offers an original way to look at international environmental governance After proposing a theory of institutional mechanisms by which global institutions shape the generation of knowledge the book turns to detailed case studies of two institutions in the under studied but vital area of marine science the Scripps Institute of Oceanography and the Inter American Tropical Tuna Commission to illustrate these mechanisms In part 1 Theory the book identifies three specific mechanisms or fixes that provide the means by which institutions shape the generation and use of knowledge With the positional fix key individuals use their social roles or positions in an institution to influence the beliefs of members or fix the direction of research The statutory fix occurs when beliefs gain acceptance as a consequence of being embedded in rules or treaties The committee fix is illustrated in the regularized practices through which social groups accept statements as group beliefs Part 2 Evidence shows these mechanisms at work in the two case studies The Scripps Institution for example illustrates the positional fix as successive directors used their position to frame research The Inter American Tropical Tuna Commission on the other hand exemplifies both the statutory fix and the committee fix in its regulatory actions

Between Preservation and Exploitation Kemi Fuentes-George, 2016-03-25 A study of biodiversity governance analyzes the factors that determine the effectiveness of transnational advocacy networks and the importance of justice claims to conservation In the late 2000s ordinary citizens in Jamaica and Mexico demanded that government put a stop to lucrative but environmentally harmful economic development activities bauxite mining in Jamaica and large scale tourism and overfishing on the eastern coast of the Yucatán Peninsula In each case the catalyst for the campaign was information gathered and disseminated by transnational advocacy networks TANs of researchers academics and activists Both campaigns were successful despite opposition from industry supporters Meanwhile simultaneous campaigns to manage land in another part of the Yucatán and to conserve migratory birds in Egypt had far less success In this book Kemi Fuentes George uses these four cases to analyze factors that determine the success or failure of efforts by TANs to persuade policymakers and private sector actors in developing countries to change environmental behavior Fuentes George argues that in order to influence the design and implementation of policy TANs must generate a scientific consensus create social relationships with local actors and advocate for biodiversity in a way that promotes local environmental justice Environmentally just policies would allow local populations access to their lands provided they use natural resources sustainably Justice claims are also more likely to generate needed support among local groups for conservation projects In their conservation efforts Jamaica Mexico and Egypt were attempting to meet their obligations under the UN Convention on Biological Diversity and other regional agreements Fuentes George's innovative analysis shows the importance of local environmental justice for the implementation of international environmental treaties

A Fragmented Continent Guy Edwards, J. Timmons Roberts, 2015-11-27 How Latin American countries became leading voices and innovators on addressing climate change and what threatens their leadership Latin American countries have increased their influence at the United Nations climate change negotiations and offered potential solutions on coping with global warming But in the face of competing priorities sometimes these climate policies are jettisoned undermined or simply ignored A Fragmented Continent focuses on Latin America's three major blocs at the UN climate negotiations and how they attempt to balance climate action with building prosperity Brazil has reduced its deforestation but continues its drive for economic growth and global recognition A leftist group led by Venezuela Bolivia and Ecuador decries the injustice of climate change but is highly dependent on the export of fossil fuels A new group including Chile Costa Rica and Peru and supported by Mexico offers sharp reductions in their carbon emissions in return for greater action by others these countries now have to deliver on their promises Weaving together issues of politics and economy trade foreign policy civil society and environmental protection A

The Samaritan's Dilemma Clark C. Gibson, Krister Andersson, The late Elinor Ostrom, Sujai Shivakumar, 2005-09-08 What's wrong with foreign aid Many policymakers aid practitioners and scholars have called into question its ability to increase economic growth alleviate poverty or promote social development At the macro level only tenuous links between development aid and improved living conditions have been found At the micro level only a few programs outlast donor support and even fewer appear to achieve lasting improvements The authors of this book argue that much of aid's failure is related to the institutions that structure its delivery These institutions govern the complex relationships between the main actors in the aid delivery system and often generate a series of perverse incentives that promote inefficient and unsustainable outcomes In their analysis the authors apply the theoretical insights of the new institutional economics to several settings First they investigate the institutions of Sida the Swedish aid agency to analyze how that aid agency's institutions can produce incentives inimical to desired outcomes contrary to the desires of its own staff Second the authors use cases from India a country with low aid dependence and Zambia a country with high aid dependence to explore how institutions on the ground in recipient countries also mediate the effectiveness of aid Throughout the book the authors offer suggestions about how to improve aid's effectiveness These suggestions include how to structure evaluations in order to improve outcomes how to employ agency staff to gain from their on the ground experience and how to engage stakeholders as owners in the design resource mobilization learning and evaluation processes of development assistance programs

Analyzing Global Environmental Issues Ariel Dinar, Amnon Rapoport, 2013-03-05 The existence of environmental dilemmas and political conflicts leads us to appreciate the need for individuals and groups to behave strategically in order to achieve their goals and maintain their wellbeing Global issues such as climate change resource depletion and pollution as well as revolts and protests against corporations regimes and other central authorities are the result of increased levels of externalities among individuals and nations These all require policy intervention at international and global levels This book includes chapters by experts proposing game theoretical solutions and applying experimental design to a variety of social issues related to global and international conflicts over natural resources and the environment The focus of the book is on applications that have policy implications relevance and consequently could lead to the establishment of policy dialogue The chapters in the book address issues that are global in nature such as international environmental agreements over climate change international water management common pool resources public goods international fisheries international trade and collective action protest and revolt The book s main objective is to illustrate the usefulness of game theory and experimental economics in policy making at multiple levels and for various aspects related to global and international issues The subject area of this book is already widely taught and researched but it continues to gain popularity given growing recognition that the environment and natural resources have become more strategic in human behavior

Beyond the Tragedy in Global Fisheries D. G. Webster, 2017-09-08 An analysis of how responsive governance has shaped the evolution of global fisheries in cyclical patterns of depletion and rebuilding dubbed the management treadmill The oceans are heavily overfished and the greatest challenges to effective fisheries management are not technical but political and economic In this book D G Webster describes how the political economy of fisheries has evolved and highlights patterns that are linked to sustainable transitions in specific fisheries Grounded in the concept of responsive governance Webster s interdisciplinary analysis goes beyond the conventional view of the tragedy of the commons Using her Action Cycle Structural Context framework she maps long running patterns that cycle between depletion and rebuilding in a process that she terms the management treadmill Webster documents the management treadmill in settings that range from small coastal fishing communities to international fisheries that span entire oceans She identifies the profit disconnect in which economic incentives are out of sync with sustainable use and the power disconnect in which those who experience the costs of overexploitation are politically marginalized She examines how these disconnects shaped the economics of expansion and documents how political systems failed to prevent related cycles of serial resource depletion Webster also traces the increasing use of restrictive management in response to worsening fisheries crises and the emergence of new noncommercial interests that demand greater management but also generate substantial conflict She finds that the management treadmill is speeding up with population growth and economic development and so concludes that sustainable fisheries can only exist within a sustainable global economic system
