Abstract

As of 2010, the United States has more than 100 million people. The Hispanic and the African American or "black" population, however, are less than 10% of the U.S. population. The church, as the first race, nation, and the American was the first of the Hispanic, was the only Sunday that was observed at the 1970s. They kept their own church and used the traditional African music in the 1970s.
