Transplantation and Cellular Therapy in

Lymphomas and Plasma Cell Disorders Saad Zafar Usmani, Nilanjan Ghosh, Edward Copelan, Peter Voorhees, 2024-12-31

Hematopoietic Cell Transplantation HCT has significantly improved the survival of patients with lymphomas and plasma cell disorders PCD The safety and effectiveness of this procedure have improved over recent years Named by ASCO in 2018 as the Advance of the Year CAR T cell therapies are increasingly utilized in the management of lymphomas and PCD since the initial FDA approval in 2017 and are being given earlier in the course of disease transforming the care of these diseases Ongoing basic work promises to improve CAR T effectiveness and accessibility This Research Topic describes the present role of CAR Ts their impact on the role of HCT and the future of these 2 therapies in lymphomas and PCD The goal of this Research Topic is to provide basic background information on HCT and CAR T therapy discuss their present roles in the management of lymphomas and PCD focusing on recent progress address practical technical issues as well as obstacles to broader use and predict the future of these two modalities based on current research Numerous studies have demonstrated substantial deficits in the understanding by many practitioners of the appropriate role and timing of HCT These shortcomings have led to underutilization and inappropriate timing of referral for transplantation Given its very recent approval and growth the need for understanding the basic work and practical aspects of CAR T therapy including barriers to care is even more pronounced This issue will educate practitioners and others with transplantation and or cellular therapy interest on basic background best practice and broad understanding of the power and limitations of these two therapies in lymphoma and PCD Weekly Weather and Crop Bulletin ,1961 Final yearly issue includes index of special articles December through

Blood Stem Cell

Transplantation Jane N. Winter, 2012-12-06 Blood Stem Cell Transplantation conveys the excitement that accompanies the newest developments in hematopoietic stem cell transplantation Some of the applications that stand to impact this field most significantly are based on recent advances in the biological sciences as demonstrated by the chapters on gene therapy on the detection of minimal residual disease using molecular techniques and on the use of radioimmunoconjugates targeting lymphoma and leukemia associated antigens Others are the results of clinical observations e g the association between graft versus host disease GVHD and durable remissions that have led to creative clinical experiments such as donor leukocyte infusions DLI Attempts to unravel the biological events that underlie the responses seen in patients with relapsed chronic myelogenous leukemia treated with DLI are likely to provide the basis for future refinements in this clinical approach. Hopefully improved response rates and reduced toxicity will result. The power of the immunologic response in controlling malignant disease is underscored in the chapter on post transplant immunotherapy. The complex immunologic process that results in clinical GVHD may be dissected and engineered to provide clinical benefits that include in addition to its antineoplastic effects the amelioration of its clinical manifestations. Better control of GVHD with less global immunosuppression will facilitate the use of mismatched and unrelated donors. This area of investigation perfectly illustrates the continued interplay between the laboratory and the clinic. The continued cross fertilization of ideas between immunologists, molecular biologists and clinical investigators is likely to yield important advances in this field for years to come. Possible applications of stem cell transplantation continue to grow with the identification of alternative sources of stem cells and the potential to engineer and expand the graft. Although the use of unrelated and mismatched donors continues to increase, the possibilities associated with umbilical cord blood transplantation are legion, especially if stem cells can be expanded ex vivo to provide grafts for full sized adults. Using techniques in which contaminating malignant cells may be eliminated from autografts through positive selection, autologous transplantation may prove highly effective, especially when coupled with post transplant immunotherapy. Some of these same methodologies have helped facilitate the use of autologous grafts for transplantation in patients with chronic myelogenous leukemia without allogeneic donors. Advances in the supportive care of transplant patients, including the pretransplant identification of those at risk from pulmonary complications and the use of cytokines to speed engraftment, have reduced morbidity and mortality to such a degree that it is appropriate to consider high dose therapy and stem cell reconstitution in patients with nonmalignant diseases. The impressive advances that have occurred in transplantation for thalassemia are described by pioneers in their area of investigation. The burgeoning field of transplantation for autoimmune disorders, including its immunobiologic basis and soon to be realized clinical potential, is also summarized. Continued progress in the use of high dose therapy with stem cell rescue for the treatment of pediatric tumors, which derives in part from improved supportive care, is detailed. The sobering voice of the health care economists underscores the necessary limitations to our seemingly unbridled imagination. Cost consciousness and financial know how will need to be reflected in future study designs. Given the seemingly endless applications of our technology, strategies to insure its cost effectiveness will be necessary. Continued financial support for laboratory investigation and for the clinical experiments they generate will be required if we are to go forward. Blood Stem Cell Transplantation lays the foundation for many of these future advances; it is incumbent upon us all to insure its realization.

Molecular Anatomic Imaging Gustav Konrad von Schulthess, 2007. This fully updated Second Edition focuses sharply on clinical PET/CT and SPECT/CT examinations, omitting lengthy physics discussions. The book is now strictly disease oriented and integrates PET/CT and SPECT/CT applications completely. When both techniques are relevant for a disease, they are discussed together when only one is relevant it is discussed alone More than 1 200 illustrations are included A bound in DVD contains over 80 cases to be viewed in three orthogonal planes and different CT windows organized as reference and self assessment files The cases provide excellent training and allow readers to test their abilities in making diagnoses on their own
