so much enjoyed getting into scrapes that he could never think of a better way out of one than to jump forthwith into another

Alphonse Biskin is the lowly footman for the highly respected Captain Lemaure and his invalid autocratic wife in Florence. Quick to dismiss him as incompetent the Lemaures are oblivious to the fact that their footman the son of a working class couple from London has a penchant for mischief and adventure imitating others and spreading a web of seemingly harmless and humorous lies for his own amusement. From a director of a museum in Barcelona to a Frenchman of noble ancestry from Florence to London Alphonse's impersonations draw him into social circles and events that he could otherwise only dream about. With a combination of natural charm and good fortune Alphonse seems destined to always get away with these deceptions but will his tricks eventually catch up with him?

The Triumphant Footman 1930 was Edith Olivier's third and most cheerful and light hearted novel.

This is the second time Jack's been coerced into searching for the Goddess Incarnate among the most promising and beautiful mages of his generation for the entertainment of the nation. Tired and jaded Jack fears the new season of Goddess Found will play out like the last until a new crew member makes him feel more at ease than he has in years. But she has no magic so she can't be his goddess. Can she? All Leta wants is enough money to pay for a p tisserie course so she can be her own boss. She just needs to keep her head down for six weeks and not get fired for bothering the ambitious contestants or making a fool of herself in front of the dreamy God Incarnate. A simple task for a wallflower right? As Leta and Jack draw closer the attention of the media and the mighty mage families places conflicting expectations upon them. And whoever the Goddess Incarnate turns out to be will have another problem. Not everyone wants the goddess to ascend.
