

SCHOLARSHIPS, GRANTS AND WORK-STUDY PROGRAMS

Scholarships:

Scholarships are financial awards that do not have to be repaid and are awarded based on a variety of criteria, such as academic merit, athletic ability, artistic talent, or community service. They can be a great way to help pay for college, as they provide free money that can be used to cover tuition, fees, books, and other expenses.

- Academic scholarships: These are awarded based on a student's academic achievements, such as high grades, test scores, or participation in honors programs.
- Athletic scholarships: These are awarded to students who excel in a particular sport and are typically offered by colleges and universities.
- Artistic scholarships: These are awarded to students who show exceptional talent in the arts, such as music, dance, theater, or visual arts.
- Community service scholarships: These are awarded to students who have demonstrated a commitment to serving their communities through volunteer work or other means.
- Minority scholarships: These are awarded to students who belong to minority groups, such as African Americans, Hispanics, Native Americans, and women.
- Departmental scholarships: These are awarded by specific departments within a college or university and are based on the student's major or area of study.
- Company-sponsored scholarships: These are awarded by businesses and organizations and are often based on the student's career goals or area of study.

There are several ways to search for and apply for scholarships:

- College and university websites: Many colleges and universities have a
