and by contextual data collected from school ICT coordinators school principals and the ICILS national research centers The IEA ICILS team systematically investigated differences among the participating countries in students CIL outcomes how participating countries were providing CIL related education and how confident teachers were in using ICT in their pedagogical practice The team also explored differences within and across countries with respect to relationships between CIL education outcomes and student characteristics and school contexts In general the study findings presented in this international report challenge the notion of young people as digital natives with a self developed capacity to use digital technology The large variations in CIL proficiency within and across the ICILS countries suggest it is naive to expect young people to develop CIL in the absence of coherent learning programs Findings also indicate that system and school level planning needs to focus on increasing teacher expertise in using ICT for pedagogical purposes if such programs are to have the desired effect The report furthermore presents an empirically derived scale and description of CIL learning that educational stakeholders can reference when deliberating about CIL education and use to monitor change in CIL over time
