

Development of Wine & Other Alcohol Beverages – using Flavourmax's Spinning Cone Column and Batch Adsorption Column Technologies

Over centuries, the art of winemaking and other alcoholic beverages, beer, cider and spirits continues to grow in popularity. However, the more products being made, the more likely it is to be made in a less-than-ideal manner. Moreover, in recent years, governments have made use of increasingly more complex and demanding laws as they strive to bring about an effort to reduce alcohol consumption across the globe.

As higher quality raw materials become more readily available, the market is becoming increasingly competitive, and this is driving producers to produce higher quality products.

Flavourmax's Spinning Cone Column (SCC) and Batch Adsorption Column (BAC) technologies are the technology needed to bring higher quality beverages to market.

Distillation

Typically, further levels, added distillation is used resulting in removal of the unwanted products or solvent, impurities and distillates around the globe. This is a method of separation used for removing unwanted from wine, beer, cider and spirits. These technologies include distillation techniques, partial vacuum distillation, and (vacuum steam) distillation and the latter being widely considered the quality and more efficient process.

The Spinning Cone Column, Flavourmax's, continuously distills distillates at low temperatures and does not require extra time resulting in high throughput of product and value.

The Spinning Cone Column

The SCC was developed and commercialized in the 1980's by the Australian company Flavourmax, with its unique ability to gently and efficiently remove volatile components from all kinds of chemical, natural or other liquids. It was specifically designed as an ideal method for isolating alcohol in wine and beer.

The key attribute of the SCC is its ability to maintain product quality, and with spinning distillation of between 20-40°C, reduces stress on the liquid and its aroma, and the ability to produce highly aromatic, the SCC is considered the best choice.

Distillation with SCC is typically broken down into the following steps:

Step 1 - The product's original aroma (approximately 1% of the total product volume) is captured from the product at around 20-40°C by the SCC's unique condenser as it flows upwards, rapidly and evenly for collection as a pure liquid.

Step 2 - The entire collected product is then re-produced at around 20-40°C again to give the full amount to remove the bulk of the alcohol. Actual levels in the product using the SCC will typically be between 0.5% and 0.7% with product be adjusted depending on requirements. Additionally, the stated removal is in the form of a high-quality spirit that can be sold, used in other applications or reconstructed through another of Flavourmax's technologies.
