

The background is a painting depicting a scene from a story. In the foreground, a man with a long grey beard and a dark suit lies in a bed, his head resting on a white pillow. He appears to be resting or dying. Behind him, on the wall, is a large, ornate portrait of a man in a dark suit and white shirt. The room is dimly lit, with a warm, golden light emanating from the portrait, creating a somber and reflective atmosphere. The overall style is that of a classical painting.

Book Bulletin of the Chicago Public Library Chicago Public Library, 1928 Tolstoy Studies Journal, 2007 The Death of Ivan Ilyich Leo Tolstoy, 2016-01-09 The Death of Ivan Ilyich Leo Tolstoy 1828 1910 The Death of Ivan Ilyich first published in 1886 is a novella by Leo Tolstoy one of the masterpieces of his late fiction written shortly after his religious conversion of the late 1870s The novella tells the story of the death of a high court judge in 19th century Russia Interpretation In his article of 1997 psychologist Mark Freeman writes Tolstoy s book is about many things the tyranny of bourgeois niceties the terrible weak spots of the human heart the primacy and elision of death But more than anything I would offer it is about the consequences of living without meaning that is without a true and abiding connection to one s life Indeed the mundane portrayal of Ivan s life coupled with the dramatization of his long and grueling battle with death seems to directly reflect Tolstoy s theories about moral living which he largely derived during his sabbatical from personal and professional duties in 1877 In his lectures on Russian literature Russian born novelist and critic Vladimir Nabokov argues that for Tolstoy a sinful life such as Ivan s is moral death Therefore death the return of the soul to God is for Tolstoy moral life To quote Nabokov The Tolstoyan formula is Ivan lived a bad life and since the bad life is nothing but the death of the soul then Ivan lived a living death and since beyond death is God s living light then Ivan died into a new life Life with a capital L The Death of Ivan Ilyich therefore is more than a story about death Death permeates the narrative in a realistic and absorbing fashion but interestingly enough the actual physicality of death is only passively mentioned in the early chapters during Ivan s wake Instead the story leads the reader through a pensive metaphysical exploration of the reason for death and what it means to truly live Tolstoy was a man who struggled greatly with self doubt and spiritual reflection especially as he grew close to his own death in 1910 In his book A Confession Tolstoy writes No matter how often I may be told You cannot understand the meaning of life so do not think about it but live I can no longer do it I have already done it too long I cannot now help seeing day and night going round and bringing me to death That is all I see for that alone is true All else is false This personal epiphany caused significant spiritual upheaval in Tolstoy s life prompting him to question the Russian Orthodox

Church sexuality education serfdom etc The literature Tolstoy composed during this period can be considered some of his most controversial and philosophical among which falls The Death of Ivan Ilyich and other famous short stories such as The Kreutzer Sonata and The Devil From a biographical standpoint therefore it is possible to interpret The Death of Ivan Ilyich as a manifestation of Tolstoy's embroilment with death and the meaning of his own life during his final years In other words by dramatizing a particular sort of lifestyle and its unbearable decline Tolstoy is able to impart his philosophy that success such as Ivan Ilyich's comes at a great moral cost and if one decides to pay this cost life will become hollow and insincere and therefore worse than death German philosopher Martin Heidegger refers to the novella in his book Being and Time 1927 as an illustration of Being towards death
