

3. Use a spark tester to check timing.

Start the engine and allow it to idle.

WARNING

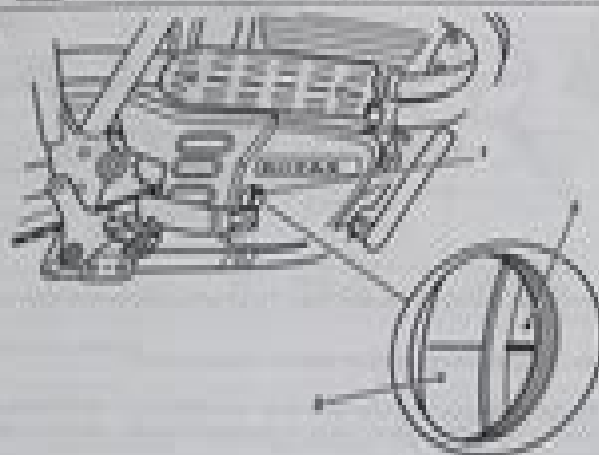

To prevent possible electric shock, do not touch the high tension wires while the engine is running.

4. The spark test has two timing marks, one for the secondary advance, the other for secondary retard. With a test plug in the spark test, the right hand one is the secondary advance timing mark and the left hand one is the secondary retard mark.

Place the timing light leads straight into the inspection hole and use the engine for a brief period at 1000 rpm (maximum advance timing mark). Fig 8.8 refers.

5. Check the timing marks alignment at 1000 rpm and 800 rpm. If the timing is correct, the magnets cover mark and flywheel mark will align as shown.

If the timing is incorrect, it is an indication of an ignition problem and should be investigated further.
