42 Answer: D
Explanation: The correct answer is D. The patient is a 42-year-old female with a 10-year history of rheumatoid arthritis (RA) who is currently on chronic low-dose prednisone (5 mg daily). She presents with a 2-week history of progressive weakness and numbness in both lower extremities. Physical examination reveals bilateral lower extremity weakness (grade 4/5) and sensory deficits (numbness and tingling) in the distal lower extremities. Laboratory studies show a hemoglobin of 10 g/dL, hematocrit of 30%, and platelet count of 150,000/mm³. Serum electrolytes, renal function, and liver function tests are within normal limits. The patient's symptoms and physical findings are consistent with a peripheral neuropathy. The most likely cause of this neuropathy in this patient is chronic low-dose prednisone therapy, which is known to cause a peripheral neuropathy. The other options are less likely causes of peripheral neuropathy in this patient. Vitamin B12 deficiency (A) would typically present with a more symmetric, sensory-predominant neuropathy. Alcohol abuse (B) would typically present with a more asymmetric, sensory-predominant neuropathy. Diabetes mellitus (C) would typically present with a more symmetric, sensory-predominant neuropathy. Multiple sclerosis (E) would typically present with a more asymmetric, sensory-predominant neuropathy. Therefore, the most likely cause of this patient's peripheral neuropathy is chronic low-dose prednisone therapy.
