The New Managerialism and Public Service

Professions I. Kirkpatrick,S. Ackroyd,R. Walker,2004-11-23 The New Managerialism and Public Service Professionals is a fresh and insightful analysis of the changes that have taken place in the UK public sector over the past twenty years Unlike many other recent accounts it is not assumed that these policy goals were always implemented or that new approaches to the management of services are necessarily effective Drawing on an extensive review of major published research it considers developments in three areas the National Health Service social services and housing This analysis reveals marked differences in the way the professions responded to change and draws attention to some significant costs associated with restructuring

New Weapons, Old Politics Thomas L. McNaugher,2011-10-01 Americans spend more than 100 billion a year to buy weapons but no one likes the process that brings these weapons into existence The problem McNaugher shows is that the technical needs of engineers and military planners clash sharply with the political demands of Congress McNaugher examines weapons procurement since World War II and shows how repeated efforts to improve weapons acquisition have instead increased the harmful intrusion of political pressures into that technical development and procurement process Today s weapons are more complicated than their predecessors So are the nation s military forces The design of new systems and their integration into the force structure demand more care time and flexibility Yet time and flexibility are precisely what political pressures remove from the acquisitions process In a series of case studies and conceptual discussions McNaugher tackles concerns at the heart of the debate about acquisition the slow and heavily bureaucratic approach to development the preference for ultimate weapons over well organized and trained forces and the counterproductive incentives facing the nation s defense firms He calls for changes that run against the current fashion less centralization or procurement less haste in developing new weapons and greater use of competition as a means of removing the development process from political oversight Above all McNaugher shows how the United States tries to buy research and development on the cheap and how costly this has been The nation can improve its acquisition process he concludes only when it recognizes the need to pay for the full exploration of new technology
